Clean Supervision: using internalized metaphors to foster self-reflection

Gina Campbell is a Certified Clean Language Practitioner based in the United States. She brings her decades of experience as an educator and a mental health counselor to the Clean Language trainings she has conducted for helping and healing professionals since 2005. Gina has written four books on the subject, each a demonstration of her ability to make the complex accessible and of her enthusiasm for a subject that clearly delights and fascinates her.

Clean Supervision: using internalized metaphors to foster self-reflection

Gina Campbell will host a series of three half-day workshops introducing Clean Language, a metaphor therapy method that guides the seeker to discover the uniquely personal metaphors that offer a way to know themselves at a profoundly deep level.

Campbell will explain the whats and whys of Clean Language and give us plenty of time in small groups to experience Clean Language, with guided activities that offer you the opportunity to make new discoveries about yourself as a supervisor. You can use these same activities with your supervisees to foster their self-reflection and growth.
